Koenig Eyes Move

Towards 100 Percent

Reassessment in '76

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

Last year Mayor Francis R. Koenig, though admitting a problem existed, wanted no part of a reassessment of the city and presumably with it a move toward assessing at 100 percent rather than the (then) 29 percent.

Koenig's reasons were primarily that any such program should be done on a county-wide basis and that for the city to "go it alone" could work a hardship on city taxpayers.

Two things have happened since then to change Koenig's thinking on the issue to the point where he told The Freeman on Wednesday, "I think our '76 budget is going to have to reflect some kind of a move for corrective measures."

One of the things that happened in fact has been happening for the past three years: a complete tax mapping and reevaluation of all property in the county. Kingston was the first municipality to be mapped; it has yet to update any of its property records. The city was last reassessed in 1956.

Out in the county, the program is moving ahead toward conclusion with some 65 percent of those properties reassessed. Jack Reynolds, director of the county's Real Property Tax Service Agency, says he expects the county to be completed by this time next year... with the exception of the city of Kingston.

"I've talked to them about it on several occasions," Reynolds said, referring to city officials. The excuse seems to be lack of staff. City Assessor Walter Tatarzewski had until this year a staff that included himself and an aide to cover more than 8,500 properties. The State Board of Equalization and Assessment recommends an assessor and an assistant for every 3,500 properties.

The other "happening" that has apparently changed the mayor's thinking is a decision by the State Court of Appeals that assessing property at anything less than full value (100 percent) is illegal.

"There is no question something's got to be done,"

Koenig says now. "We'll either have to update our properties with our present staff or bring in outside experts to handle it. Maybe the answer is to go to full value the way the court said to do it."

Going to full value by using existing property values would merely compound the inequities in the opinion of Reynolds, the county's expert.

Reassessment now seems more likely, but the failure to deal with that problem, dating back at least ten years—former Mayor Raymond W. Gar-raghan talked about it—is beginning to take its toll on city taxpayers.

The city's equalization rate has dropped to an official 26.2 percent from last year's 29 percent meaning in the judgment of the State Board of Equalization and Assessment, the city's is assessing its properties at slightly more than one-fourth of market value as determined by comparing current sales against property as listed by the assessor.

With that fact being made official on Friday by the state, Frank Fabbie, city Republican leader, has renewed his attacks on Mayor Koenig for failure to protest the decrease in equalization.

Fabbie says that if all things remain equal with the county budget next year, the change in equalization rate will cost city taxpayers $126,428 or about $3.30 per thousand in taxes. The Koenig Administration raised taxes by $3.25 this year.

Koenig says that the question of reassessment is one of cost to carry it out but allows that the present system is going to get increasingly expensive as higher and higher taxes are heaped on a stagnant tax base.

Jobless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate dropped 0.6 per cent to 8.6 percent in June, but due to an influx of students entering the labor market the jobless situation remained unchanged from May, the Labor Department reported today.

Although the unemployment rate last month was not so encouraging as it might appear by the size of the drop from May, it was a signal that rising unemployment may have halted.

The six-tenths of 1 percent decline from the 9.2 percent in May was at the lower end of a scale that government analysts had estimated would be needed to show improvement in the jobless picture, which had been deteriorating for the past 14 months.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles the monthly data, said employment held steady at 84.4 million workers in June. Employment rose in the nonfarm sector but was offset by a matching decline in agriculture, BLS said.

Although the number of workers held steady in June, the total labor force for purposes of calculating the jobless rate declined by 600,000 in June, BLS said.

This decline contributed to the "technical" drop in unemployment although in actual terms, the jobless rate was unchanged from May. A study of figures for July will be necessary before a better analysis of unemployment conditions can be made.

Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices, registering their fifth decline in seven months, dropped 0.1 percent in June, the Labor Department said today.

The June decline after small increases in April and May was another indication that the inflationary pressures of 1973-74 were continuing to ease.

Leading the decline for June were farm prices, down 1.4 percent. Agricultural products fell fast enough to offset a relatively modest 0.4 percent rise for industrial commodities, which includes steel, petroleum and other industrial goods.

Wholesale prices have risen 11.6 percent in the past 12 months, high by historical standards but a much softer inflation rate than late last year when farm and industrial prices were increasing at a rate better than 20 percent annually.

The 1.4 percent drop in prices of farm products and processed foods took normal seasonal factors into account. On an unadjusted basis prices in this category rose 0.6 percent, less than usual for midsummer.

Fruit and vegetable prices were sharply higher last month, and live poultry and livestock prices also rose. But eggs, plant and animal fibers, hay and grains all dropped.

In the processed food and feed area, poultry, meat and animal feeds accounted for most of the June rise, but these largely were offset by declines in sugar, fats and oils, and cereal and bakery products.

Wallace Didn't Know It, But He Fractured Left Leg

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George Wallace somehow managed to fracture his left leg without knowing it. But his physician says the break should heal without difficulty.

The leg is paralyzed as the result of a would-be assassin's bullet May 15, 1972, that left Wallace confined to a wheelchair.

The injury is not expected to affect Wallace's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. He had announced he would devote most of his attention in the next few months to Alabama problems, and had scheduled only two out-of-state speeches during July and August.

Dr. Hamilton Hutchinson said Wednesday Wallace had suffered a simple fracture of the tibia "probably within the last two or three days."

He said he assumed the injury occurred during the governor's physical therapy exercises. But he said he could not be sure because Wallace has no feeling in the leg and had not noticed the injury until swelling developed.

"There is very little risk" of complications, Hutchinson said. "It is a simple break. It will heal."

"Anytime anyone is put in a cast, there is a risk of phlebitis," he said, referring to the ailment that prevented former President Richard Nixon from testifying at the Watergate coverup trial.

The doctor said the risk of phlebitis was very small.

Wallace will have to remain in a cast for six to eight weeks. But his office said he expected to stay home for only a week before returning to the Capitol. A spokesman for the governor said he would work from his office during the next week.

Wallace has been paralyzed from the waist down since an assassin's bullet struck him as he campaigned in a Maryland shopping center for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace's office said the governor "noticed a swelling of his knee and a slight elevation of temperature" Wednesday and called his doctor, who discovered the break and placed the leg in a cast at a hospital.

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Legislative leaders later today were to ask rank-and-file members to approve an agreement forged in a late night meeting with Gov. Hugh L. Carey giving New York City $300 million in budget balancing taxing authority.

The plan, hammered out at the Executive Mansion Wednesday night, also would appropriate an additional $220 million in state funds for schools statewide, but would not require additional state taxes this year.

Another section of the agreement involved Republican acceptance of a so-called municipal overburden concept that would appropriate $25 million in the next fiscal year the upstate cities of Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Yonkers.

Leaders, questioned by a mob of about 50 reporters as their cars left the conference, declined to give details of the tentative plan.

Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupak, smiling broadly as her limousine passed through the wrought iron gates in front of the mansion, said, "The people of New York can rest easy tonight. As far as this group was concerned there was an agreement, its set."

Asked the size of the tax package the city would be granted, Miss Krupak said, "They were talking in the neighborhood of $300 million."

Assembly Majority Leader Perry B. Durvae told reporters as his car left the mansion the compromise involved "give in all areas by everybody... it's not a governor's program; not a leaders' program," but a consensus plan.

He hastily added, "There will be no state taxes, no state taxes now."

A week-long stalemate at the beginning of the meeting had Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson using the city's need for the new taxing

Garbagemen

Agree to End

NYC Strike

New York City and its sanitationmen reached an agreement today to end a three-day strike which has piled up more than 70 million pounds of stinking garbage on the city's streets.

A spokesman for the mayor said details of the agreement to end the walkout, protesting the layoff of some 3,000 garbagemen because of a financial crisis, had been pounded out overnight between city negotiators and union officials.

A union spokesman said John DeLury, president of the United Sanitationmen's Association, would hold a news conference later today to discuss the agreement.

In an action directly related to the garbage problem, firemen protesting the elimination of 26 fire companies began a slowdown and mass sick calls, leaving the force unable to cope with hundreds of fires set in piles of trash by youngsters, mostly in slum neighborhoods.

"It's a hostile situation," a fire captain said today. "They're starting fires and barricading streets. We've been bombed."

Police in New York voted Wednesday against a strike. "We will not endanger the public," said the president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, which has lost more than 5,000 members in the layoffs.

But the police union called on its members to observe all "safety precautions" on the job and said it would give "logistical support" to laid-off cops who have been picketing City Hall.

City officials planned to send a small group of refuse trucks with police escorts around the city today, offering a do-it-yourself garbage plan for residents who wanted to heave their bags of garbage into the trucks. But only a handful of sanitation workers responded to back-to-work orders early today, and they refused to drive the trucks past picket lines.

The garbagemen's union said the strike, now in its third day, was an unauthorized walkout by workers angered at the layoff of nearly 3,000 men.

More than 200 fires broke out Wednesday night and early today, predominantly in the city's slum neighborhoods. The reduced force of firemen and police on duty were forced to ignore many of the smaller street-corner fires, and a spokesman, Fire Capt. Gilbert Poirat, said the firefighters' situation was "as hectic as I've ever seen."

More than 350 firemen reported they were sick Wednesday and did not work — 10 times the normal amount, according to officials. The firemen's union advised its members still working to "work at a pace conducive to safety... do one man's work," and to "report all injuries, no matter how slight."

power as a wedge to assure approval of additional education aid. Carey, backed up by Democrats, was insisting that any new school aid would have to be accompanied by matching state taxes.

When asked by reporters as his car rolled through the mansion gates if immediate legislative action on the compromise was planned, Anderson said, "I think not." He indicated doubt that a bill would be ready for a vote until after the holiday weekend.

The conference was arranged by Carey after Democratic and Republican legislative leaders determined in a head-to-head conference Wednesday afternoon that neither side had any room to compromise from their earlier positions.

Those at the meeting included Republicans Durvae and Anderson, who held veto power over any proposed legislative settlement, and Democrats Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut and Senate Minority Leader Manfred Ohrenstein.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame, after addressing residents of his city at 6 p.m. on a live television broadcast from Gracie Mansion in New York, boarded a chartered plane to Albany to join in the meeting.

However, the mayor did not take part in the talks until the closing minutes of discussion. He remained at the mansion overnight.

After the meeting had ended, Beame said from the steps of the mansion, "I'm encouraged by the talks going on tonight and, if anything happens tomorrow, I'll be happy."

The Senate had approved and sent to the Assembly a single bill linking the issues. It would appropriate $260 million in school aid and authorize $377.5 million in city business taxes.

The Assembly had forwarded to the Senate separate bills that would appropriate $331 million in school aid with $83 million in new taxes and grant the city $386 million in tax authorization.

Carey had taken the position that the only school aid possible without new taxes was $110 million in the next school year.

During an afternoon meeting, Anderson told Steingut, according to legislative staff sources, that he would be "unable to sell" any New York City tax package to his majority senators unless it was linked with school aid.

Steingut, the staff sources said, indicated he would have similar problems if he presented his party members "with anything like the $110 million in school aid the governor was talking about."

Sportsmen, Reid to Discuss Carey's Black Creek Veto

KINGSTON

The president of the Federated Sportsmen's Clubs of Ulster County will meet with the commissioner of Environmental Conservation in Albany next Wednesday to discuss the future of Black Creek following Gov. Carey's veto of legislation designating it as a "scenic" waterway.

Fred Faerber's meeting with Commissioner Ogden Reid was scheduled several weeks ago following the deer-kill incident in New Paltz to discuss environmental problems in general but will now concentrate on Black Creek. "The ball game's back in Commissioner Reid's lap now," Faerber said.

His reaction to Carey's veto was mixed. "As a sportsman, you know, we have to accept it as a loss," Faerber figures though that the state, which was ordered to conduct a complete study of the Black Creek situation by Carey, will offer legislation that will pass and be approved by Carey, perhaps in a year to a year and a half.

The legislation approved by both houses of the legislature by overwhelming votes — 59-0 in the Senate — would have designated the entire 8.6-mile length of the creek from the Hudson River to a pump house in Lloyd as "scenic."

Carey, in his veto message Wednesday, indicated that designating the entire 8.6 miles as scenic might be "unwarranted" and that more study on the matter should be undertaken before a final decision is made.

The state has three levels of restriction on its waterways ranging from "wild," the most restrictive to "scenic" to "recreational." Designation of the creek as "scenic" would have placed it under Department of Environmental Conservation land use restrictions for up to 1.5 miles from each bank.

Faerber, whose organization has been in the forefront of the Black Creek issue for the past year, said the DEC's study of the matter was something less than complete, involving two canoe trips down the creek and overflying it twice with helicopters for some aerial photos.

The study which formed the basis of legislation approved by the legislature was conducted by biology professors from Dutchess County Community College and Bard College and their students. Out of that study came the recommendation for 8.6 miles of scenic river.

The state had originally planned to designate only a 2.3 mile stretch from Chodikee Lake to Floyd Ackert Road as "scenic," leaving the remainder for recreational use.

According to Faerber, as late as April 24, the DEC was in favor of a four mile "scenic" designation from the railroad crossing to the lake. "That was acceptable to us," Faerber said. At that point, however, the legislation had been drafted and commitments made.

Faerber predicts there will be legislation protecting Black Creek within the next year to a year and a half. "I believe when it's all done they'll come out with what they (DEC) recommended. I can live with this. The Town of Lloyd will get its recreational area and the people on the other side of 9W will get what they want."

"Other than time, I really don't think we've lost any ground," he said.

Dem Candidate Warns of Nuc Campaign

SAUGERTIES
"It is obvious that the Power Authority of the State of New York (PASNY) plans to subject us to a highly sophisticated public relations campaign and we had better be prepared," Paul Miller, Democratic candidate for supervisor of the Town of Saugerties warned today with regard to the proposed nuclear power plant in Cementon. Miller said he was contacted by John Lenney, Catskill information officer for PASNY the day after he (Miller) made public statements regarding his concern for nuclear fission. Miller made it clear, today however, that he does not object to the nuclear power people telling their side of the story.

"I suspect Lenney was expecting a confrontation with a wild-eyed enemy of progress when he reached me on the phone," said Miller. "I hope he was agreeably surprised to find I was quite willing to sit down and discuss the problem with him. We set up a date and he visited me at my home one morning, bringing with him, at my suggestion, various pieces of literature explaining PASNY's side of the argument. Certainly no harm can be done to the cause of truth by frank and open debate on the subject," he suggested.

Miller admits he remains unconvinced that the nuclear fission people have made a convincing case for themselves.

"They are trying hard to persuade the public that nuclear reactor plants are extremely safe; and to sweeten the prospect still more they are promising attractive fringe benefits to the area, in the form of additional jobs, recreational facilities, and tax benefits. No wonder community resistance sometimes crumbles before so tempting a package of goodies."

Apart from the question of safety, which Miller says has not yet been satisfactorily answered by nuclear reactor proponents, he also is concerned with the overall impact on the environment and the economy a plant at Cementon would have. "Without an exhaustive study of all the factors it would be folly to agree to the construction of a nuclear plant at Cementon," Miller said.

Container Bill Support Urged

KINGSTON

Support of the beverage container legislation now before the New York State Senate Committee on Consumer Protection and Assembly Committee on Commerce, Industry and Economic Development, is being urged by the League of Women Voters of Mid-Ulster County.

The bill provides for a three to five-cent deposit on all soft drink and malt beverage containers sold in the state redemption centers to make returns of containers easier for grocers and consumers, and a ban on plastic loops and pull tabs. The effective date would be July 1, 1978 to allow ample time to phase in the new system.

LWV said that contrary to a newsletter of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce, the league does not have a "pre-disposed hostility to non-returnable beverage containers. The newsletter was cited in the Freeman recently by Anthony J. Kondykar, vice president of Dutchess Beer Distributors.

The league said it has been concerned with the environment for years including the problem of solid waste and conservation of natural resources. LWV claims the Chamber newsletter is quoted "again and again" by opponents of beverage container legislation, using supportive arguments which the league considers erroneous.

The chamber contends that washing returnable bottles is a heavier source of water pollution than the manufacture of returnables. LWV claims the chamber avoids the issue, discussing washing bottles rather than the manufacture of containers, implying that volume of water used in washing indicates pollution and ignoring the acids, strong caustics other polluting chemicals added to water during the manufacture of bottles.

The chamber foresees that prices of beverages in returnable containers would 'soar substantially.' "One has only to compare prices on the supermarket shelves which carry both returnables and non-returnables to answer that point," the league states.

"Opponents of container legislation dispute the LWV's report of the cost to pick up litter along the New York State Thruway, 50 percent of which is attributed to non-returnable beverage containers." The difference lies in the basis for estimating percentages; by the piece (one-gum wrapper equals one bottle)? or by volume (so many cigarette butts equal one bottle)? by weight (13 aluminum cans equal one bottle)? However it is figured, picking up bottles and cans is a one-by-one pickup — no spearing with a stick," the league declared.

"The claim that beverage legislation would force a large brewery to close and 'throw thousands out of jobs' is a fear tactic which was also used in Oregon but which proved to be unfounded, the league said. "Two separate studies in Oregon found that there was an overall gain of about 365 new jobs and an additional payroll of $1.6 million after such legislation went into effect."

Because the league feels that we, as a nation, cannot continue the waste of valuable natural resources, pollution of water and air, and such formidable accumulation of solid waste as is caused by throwaway bottles and cans, it urges all voters to contact their New York State senators and assemblymen requesting them to vote in favor of the beverage container legislation now being considered in both houses.

Police Patrolling Streets in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Police in armored cars patrolled the streets of Beirut today to put down sporadic shooting that threatened to rekindle the bloodiest religious warfare in Lebanon's 32 years of independence.

The latest casualty figures for 10 days of warfare between Christians and Moslems showed 283 persons died and 750 were injured in the rocket, mortar, bomb and rifle battles. A statement today from the security liaison office said armed men had closed Fourn el Chebbak, a main highway leading into the city.

Scattered shooting was reported in the area, occupied mainly by rightists, and in other parts of the capital.

Witnesses said armed men took to the streets following unconfirmed reports that 10 local citizens had been kidnapped.

The shooting marred the day-old cease-fire arranged by Premier Rashid Karami's new "salvation" government.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, Lebanon's security chief, said the only tension in the Beirut area was in the suburbs of Ain Rummaneh, a Christian stronghold, and Chiah, controlled by Moslems.

All roads leading into the capital reopened Wednesday and some supplies began flowing in from the countryside. For the first time in a week some shops opened.

But heavily armed security forces had orders to shell suspected sniper hideouts and shoot on sight anyone breaking the cease-fire.

Radio Beirut quoted Karami Wednesday night as blaming Israel for instigating the latest — and worst — round of sectarian strife in Lebanon.

"Bombing of our economic organizations and industries aims at serving the enemy's interest..." Karami said. "Therefore we accuse Israel directly of being behind this scheme."

He gave no other details of the allegation, but appealed to the people:

"Sabotage is easy. So is killing. But we should ask ourselves why should we kill each other and why should we sabotage our economy."

Karami met leaders of both the right and left Wednesday apparently to prepare for the first session of his six-member cabinet.

Lebanese security forces were searching for an American army colonel abducted from his taxi Sunday night by a gang of armed men.

The officer, Col. Ernest R. Morgan, 43, of Petersburg, Va., had stopped in Beirut on his way to Turkey. He was dragged from his taxi at a roadblock.

Still Missing

The State Department said that it still has been unable to trace U.S. Army Colonel Ernest R. Morgan, who was apparently abducted at a roadblock in Beirut, Lebanon on Sunday. (UPI)

Muggy Weather Continues in Midwest

By UPI

Illinois residents were asked to curtail unnecessary driving, garbage burning or electrical usage today because of heavy air pollution. Alerts were also posted for much of the Midwest due to the hot, stuffy conditions.

The yellow alert issued Wednesday by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency involved six counties, including the Chicago and St. Louis metropolitan areas, as ozone pollution neared the danger levels. An ozone watch was in effect for the rest of the state.

Forecasters expected little letup in the hot, muggy weather today.

The yellow alert is the second stage in the state's four-stage plan to protect the public during periods of high air pollution.

The EPA warned that if elevated air pollution levels persist, it could issue a red alert — curtailing industry. At that point, ozone levels would be considered a danger to persons with coronary or respiratory ailments.

They said unnecessary driving, garbage burning or use of electricity contribute to the formation of ozone.

Pollution advisories also were issued in Iowa and Indiana.

Temperatures hovered in the high 80s and 90s across the region with little change in sight.

Haze spread from the Plains to the Appalachians as a result of a humid air mass which streamed northward from the Gulf of Mexico.

Tornadoes swept through portions of northern Minnesota and southern Texas.

At least two twisters skipped across the farmlands of north-eastern Minnesota.

One twister injured five occupants of a trailer home near the Pine County town of Finlayson, Minn. and the other damaged several farm buildings and overturned trailer homes in Palisade in Aitkin County to the west, though there were no injuries.

Winds of up to 70 miles per hour and lightning accompanied the storm, downing trees and damaging power sources.

Other tornadoes were sighted near Houston and Corpus Christi, Tex., but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Burying Their Dead in Private

OGLALA, S.D. (UPI) — The mourning Indians were determined to bury their dead in private.

They took Joseph Stuntz, 24, to his grave Wednesday and, at gunpoint, turned away newsmen trying to cover the event near Oglala. There also were unconfirmed reports the Indians had confiscated television film.

Stuntz, of Washington state, was killed in a gunfight that broke out following what authorities called the ambush-execution of FBI agents Jack Coler and Ronald Williams.

The agents were shot to death as they attempted to serve a warrant at a house in this village on the Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux Reservation.

FBI sources said the agency had given up searching the gully-cut 3,000-square mile reservation for 16 men they believed were involved in the slayings. An armored personnel carrier was removed from the village of Pine Ridge Tuesday night.

An FBI spokesman in Washington said the bureau was not pulling out of the reservation but was shifting some of its force to Rushville, Neb., about 20 miles to the south. He said FBI personnel had been working "in a building where the temperature reached 109 degrees. They moved them down the road. We were not pulling out."

Hobart Horse, one of the four Indians named in the warrants the slain agents were trying to serve, turned himself in to federal authorities at Rapid City, S.D., Tuesday.

One of the four wanted for assault and kidnaping on the reservation is now still at large — James Theodore Eagle, the man Coler and Williams were looking for when they came to Oglala.

Kendell Cumming, Bureau of Indian Affairs superintendent at Pine Ridge, responded angrily to charges he hobbled the FBI in its battle last Thursday with the Indians. He said that he acted to prevent a "bloodbath" and that the situation on the reservation was "going downhill with no brakes and no driver."

South Dakota Attorney General William Janklow had charged that Cumming caused a two-hour delay in the FBI's move against the house from which the agents were shot. Agents said they believed that during those two hours the 16 wanted men slipped away into the surrounding hills.

Unemployment Benefits: Number Rises in Ulster

KINGSTON
The number of persons in Ulster County receiving unemployment benefits continues to rise despite a drop in late May.

According to Industrial Commissioner Louis L. Levine, head of the New York State Labor Department, 5,469 persons were collecting unemployment benefits the week of June 20, compared to 5.142 the week of June 13.

The number of persons registered for unemployment over the past few months has numbered in the vicinity of 5,000-plus with the exception of the week of May 30 when it dropped below that mark to 1,997.

Levine points out, however, that the number of persons collecting unemployment benefits does not necessarily correspond to the number of persons who are unemployed and are either ineligible to receive benefits or have failed to register for them.

Presently there are 681,747 persons collecting unemployment benefits under four separate programs in New York State in the week ending June 20 as compared with 671,103 the previous week.

The Teamsters' previous contract expired June 30, and Local 445 officials had promised a strike if a satisfactory contract was not agreed upon.

Local 445, which represents some 2,000 workers in the Mid-Hudson Region, approved by a unanimous voice vote a three-year package that gives heavy construction workers and general supply yard employees a

Mrs. Gandhi's Foes Continue Their Defiance

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Foes of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi are defying her week-old state of emergency with marches, rallies and sabotage in three of India's most populous provinces.

Travelers from Bihar, Gujarat and Tamil Nadu said Wednesday the three states have been in turmoil since Mrs. Gandhi launched a crackdown against her political opponents last week.

The travelers said protesters have cut telephone lines, ripped out railroad track and demonstrated in defiance of police bullets in the three states, home for one-fifth of India's 600 million residents.

Opposition politicians said the government of Mrs. Gandhi has imprisoned 6,500 political foes across the country in the past week. The government has reported seizing about 900 persons.

Travelers from Bihar said police in Patna, the state capital, have been shooting at demonstrators protesting the roundup of opposition leaders.

The travelers reported several demonstrators killed by police bullets during the protests but declined to estimate the specific number of casualties.

They said police have rounded up about 700 opposition leaders in Bihar, a state of 56 million in eastern India, since Mrs. Gandhi imposed the emergency decree last Thursday.

Mrs. Gandhi, fighting for her political life in the face of a conviction for election fraud, has accused opposition politicians of a "widespread conspiracy" to disrupt internal security.

The travelers said saboteurs in Bihar, the poorest state in India, have cut telephone lines and ripped out railroad track in several spots across the state.

Bihar is the home state of 72-year-old Jayaprakash Narayan, a prominent anti-government crusader jailed at the start of the nationwide crackdown.

Travelers from Gujarat, where Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party lost a legislative by-election this month, said protest marches and rallies are taking place every day.

They said the opposition-led state government has ignored federal orders to arrest demonstrators in Gujarat, a west Indian state of 27 million.

Travelers said the ruling People's Progressive party in Tamil Nadu has defied Mrs. Gandhi's tough press censorship decrees, letting newspapers in the southern state criticize the prime minister.

Space Rendezvous Going on as Scheduled

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The federal space agency is going ahead with plans to send three American astronauts to a space rendezvous with two Soviet cosmonauts despite a U.S. senator's request it be postponed.

The astronauts were taking their final checkouts today in the Apollo spacecraft that will carry them to the meeting in space two weeks from now.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration kept the Apollo-Soyuz test project on schedule for a July 15 launch despite a request from Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., that it be delayed.

Proxmire said in Washington the CIA has doubts about the technical capability of the Russians to handle simultaneously both the rendezvous mission with the American astronauts and the orbiting Salyut space station.

Dr. Glynn Lunney, technical director for the Apollo mission, said "NASA has concluded that the Soyuz 18-Saljut 4 mission does not constitute a hazard" for the mission.

The astronauts — Brig. Gen. Thomas Stafford, Donald K. "Deke" Slayton and Vance Brand — flew to the launch site from the Johnson Space Center in Houston for a final dress rehearsal today.

Launch crews Wednesday completed a week-long test which put the Saturn 1B rocket and the spacecraft systems through the minute-by-minute countdown planned for the real thing.

The test, the last major one before the actual countdown starts next week, climaxed with a simulated Apollo blastoff at 3:46 p.m. EDT — four minutes ahead of the 3:50 time planned for July 15. The liftoff was moved ahead to avoid bad weather moving into the area.

The Saturn launch rocket was drained of its volatile fuels after the Wednesday test to eliminate hazards for the astronauts.

In Russia, training chief Lt. Gen. Vladimir Shantalov said cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov would fly to the cosmodrome at Baikonur today "to get the feel of the ship Soyuz" in the final days.

The Russians are scheduled to take off at 8:20 a.m. July 15, 7½ hours before the American team. The Russians' formal training has ended, Shantalov said.

The two spacecraft are scheduled to rendezvous in orbit over Europe July 17 and fly together for two days before separating and heading home.

Natural Gas to Be Scarce

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's spokesman says there will be no gasoline shortage for motorists this summer but that natural gas will be scarce in the fall and winter.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters those predictions emerged from a meeting President Ford held Tuesday with his energy advisers.

The advisers concluded "there are no prospects of gasoline shortages this summer," Nessen said, but New Jersey, Ohio, North Carolina "and other states of the industrial Midwest and Northeast" will suffer later this year "serious natural gas shortages."

He said the natural gas pinch probably will affect industries rather than residences and "that means jobs."

Nessen said the forecast was that this winter such alternative fuels as propane could make up for the shortage of natural gas but that in future years, a growing natural gas shortage could not be covered by such alternatives.

He said figures showing declining gasoline stocks had led to fears of a gasoline shortage in the summer, but that the decline has leveled off and the threatened shortage vanished.

The natural gas shortage, Nessen said, is largely man-made and, in the administration's view, will continue until natural gas prices are no longer regulated by the federal government.

He said, for example, there is no shortage of natural gas inside Texas. Gas produced and sold within a state is not subject to federal price regulation.

A unit of natural gas worth $2 within Texas sells for only 52 cents if shipped across the state line due to the "artificially low price" set by federal regulation, Nessen said.

The federal price holddown, he said, has discouraged production.

Ford Signs Housing Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has signed the middle-income housing bill without saying whether he intends to release any of the $10 billion it authorizes for the government purchase of mortgages.

Ford said in a mid-day ceremony in the Rose Garden Wednesday that a housing recovery already was under way even though the housing industry, suffering upwards of 40 percent unemployment, contends construction activity is at half the level of a few years ago.

Ford made no commitment about releasing the funds. He said they would be available "if required to sustain the housing recovery under way."

But when the bill passed Congress last week, Housing Secretary Carla Hills promised that "meaningful amounts" would be released.

Ford also indicated he did not intend to put into effect the bill's provisions for anti-foreclosure loans unless the foreclosure rates "rise significantly."

The President cited the legislation as a model of congressional-executive cooperation. But the bill actually was written to White House specifications.

It was adopted hastily after the House failed by 16 votes to override a veto of a Democratic bill initiating a program of more direct subsidies of mortgage interest rates.

Mrs. Hills said it would have taken until fall or winter to adopt the regulations needed to put that program into place.

Anachronisms

Demolition Derbies are symbolic of America's past penchant for wasteful extravagance, and as such they should be treated as the anachronisms they are. The idea of the game is that dozens of jalopies are confined to an area of a field and the objective is to render one and all complete wrecks. The winner's mantle goes to the last auto still running. Shades of the Roman gladiators, and three cheers for carnage. Not only is the senseless waste of usable material such as steel, glass and plastics to be deplored, not to mention the gallons of gasoline burned for no useful purpose, but the attitudes of the spectators must also be somewhat suspect. Simply to view destruction for that sake alone is hardly indicative of a positive frame of mind. Doubtless, psychiatrists can come up with some sort of rationale—possibly hating one's father, which is the most popular of the lot—but does the whole thing really serve any purpose in these days when a awakening spirit of conservation is finally taking hold? Mayor Francis Koenig, after viewing the last one at Dietz Stadium, stated he was going to examine the aspect of spectator safety, with the possibility of banning them if the crowd is at all endangered. Any reason should be sufficient to keep these exhibitions puerility away from here.

Some Restraint

The freeze on spending for consulting contracts ordered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare doesn't involve a great amount of money — by federal standards — nor does it promise to be of long duration.

But the action is encouraging, because — in the words of Deputy Controller Charles Miller — HEW "blew the whistle on its own spending."

Miller said the department has neared the legal limit set by Congress for expenditures on private surveys, advice and information for the fiscal year ending June 30. An estimated $42 million of the $60 million authorized already has been spent.

The brake applied by HEW is significant simply because voluntary restraint is a rarity in Washington.

Perhaps we're overly optimistic, but we like to think that the efforts by Congress to adhere to recently adopted budget controls may have a constructive influence on the agencies supported by congressional appropriations.

Squabbling

The political squabbling in the U.S. Senate over the contested New Hampshire senatorial seat is becoming a disgrace. The Democrat majority would not even go along with an effort to commit the Senate to resolving the issues by Aug. 1. Does that mean senators will still be fussing over this issue when the leaves start turning?

It is bad enough that the people of New Hampshire have been waiting since the first of the year to gain their entitled representation in the Senate. It is worse that important issues are being bogged down in the Senate while senators argue over disputed New Hampshire ballots. If the Senate had acted responsibly in the first place, New Hampshire could have scheduled a new election, held it and sent an undisputed winner to Washington long ago.

Berry's World

"Doggone it, Ron! Couldn't you have waited until my meeting was over to tell him the new swimming pool is ready?"

By Jack Anderson With Les Whitten

WASHINGTON—Yesterday we reported that Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos offered a former confidant, Primitivo Mijares, a $50,000 bribe not to tell the U.S. Congress what he knows about corruption in the Philippines.

Today we can reveal the story that Marcos tried to cover up. It is another Watergate scandal, Philippine version — a story of high crimes and misdemeanors, ranging from abuse of power to misuse of government funds.

The story is told in a 24-page memo, which Mijares submitted to the House International Organizations Subcommittee. In the memo, he freely confesses his own dirty work for Marcos.

The memo details how Marcos won re-election in 1969 using some of the same tactics that Richard Nixon picked up in 1972.

Mijares describes the Marcos campaign as "the dirtiest election ever held in the Philippines."

Marcos used "goons, guns and gold," his former confidant charges, to win the 1969 election. The strategy was to create an atmosphere of disturbance, which called for Marcos' strong hand to control.

The Philippine president, according to the memo, "had military personnel infiltrate the ranks of demonstrators to explode bombs in their midst and to instigate the demonstrators into committing acts of violence."

Philippine air force infiltrators allegedly lobbed "heavy explosives in front of the (U.S.) consular offices," and "armed forces psychological warfare units" conducted bombing on Manila's water system, city hall and the bathroom of the Constitutional Convention. The violence was "later blamed by Mr. Marcos on the Maoist People's Army."

The incidents that Marcos secretly encouraged, Mijares alleges, had their innocent victims. When a bomb exploded inside a department store, for example, "a family man who was buying a gift for a child observing its birthday was blown to bits." A conscience-stricken police sergeant later confessed he had planted the bomb "on superior orders," claims Mijares.

To improve his press notices, Marcos allowed "heavy borrowing from the Philippine Bank," according to the memo, so a toady could buy up a "media empire." Allegedly, the pro-Marcos media even collected "part of their salaries from the president's contingent fund."

These tactics worked so well, charges Mijares, that the re-elected Marcos was limited to two terms, but he had no intention of retiring.

He continued to whip up a crisis fever. He staged "a supposed landing of combat weapons," for example, "along the coast of Digo." Mijares claims the weapons were planted by "a special operations group of trusted military men," but Marcos loudly blamed "a foreign power" and "Maoist guerrillas."

There was also a faked ambush, Mijares charges, involving a Philippine official's car. By exploiting these incidents, Marcos had the country psychologically ready for his proclamation of martial law on Sept. 21, 1970. With a great show of benevolence, he proclaimed a so-called "smiling martial law." He quickly restored order and gave the citizenry respite from turmoil. But he also closed down opposition newspapers and jailed recalcitrant editors and rivals.

Marcos asked a Constitutional Convention to put a stamp of legitimacy upon his dictatorship. But when the delegates showed a little independence, the memo states, he "caused the arrest and detention in military stockades of delegates" and "bribed floor leaders of the convention with money and favors."

To make doubly sure the convention gave Marcos the powers he wanted, alleges Mijares the results "were manufactured by a group headed by the president's favorite brother-in-law, Gov. Benjamin Romualdez."

Mijares had personal knowledge that the convention vote was rigged, he writes, because "I was a member of that group." Just as John Dean later confessed his role in the Nixon scandals, Mijares describes how he ordered the takeover of a newspaper, investigated an Associated Press reporter, prepared phony stories on revolutionaries and committed other outrages on Marcos' orders.

The Mijares memo then tells how Marcos' "military regime has gone absolutely corrupt." The dictator parcelled out to his cronies the licenses to smuggle in luxury goods and to smuggle out sugar, copra, lumber and cement, charges Mijares. Military supporters have been given fabulously lucrative rackets in Manila to run as they please, he adds.

Through front men, according to Mijares, Marcos has taken over agricultural lands in northern Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao. He also allegedly controls oil concessions, a huge export business, a free trade zone in Mariveles and even a claim on some buried World War II Japanese treasure in the Sierra Madre.

Mijares also claims that Marcos has misused some of the $100 million in U.S. aid he gets each year. The greatest part of U.S. medical aid, for example, "goes to the United Drug Company, the biggest pharmaceutical firm in the country, which is owned by a front man of the president," alleges the memo.

Yet the U.S. State Department, swears Mijares, has thwarted Marcos' democratic opponents by supporting "the Philippine martial regime."

By William F. Buckley, Jr.

There is a priceless institution in America called John Lofton. He is a youngish man who used to edit the Republican Party's official fortnightly, Monday, wherein he took licentious pleasure in reproducing statements by prominent American liberals exactly contradicting their present positions. He is now a syndicated columnist, and not since the days of Westbrook Pegler has anyone felt as free — indeed, as duty-bound — to telephone public figures to ask them, so to speak face-to-face, just exactly what did they mean by saying so-and-so.

Take, for instance, the lovely Shana Alexander, a cultural delight who writes a column for Newsweek. When there is a liberal zephyr in the air, Shana will rustle. And sure enough, just a few weeks ago she found herself saying, apropos of her disapproval of the South Vietnamese refugee problem, "if we know one thing about the government founded by Ho Chi Minh, it is that his social services are excellent: good health care, day care, and educational programs abound, especially for the poor."

Now you and I and three and one-half million people who read Newsweek would pass over that asseveration without applying our automatic brakes. Not Lofton. Moreover, he proceeds to put in a call to Shana Alexander. He doesn't know her, but that doesn't matter — Miss Alexander, a professional journalist, has put in heaps of calls to people she doesn't know. Journalists understand that they have responsibilities to fellow journalists.

How, Lofton asked over the telephone, does Miss Alexander know this about North Vietnam? We, she said snippily, was "busy typing" just then, and didn't care to discuss "this thing"; Lofton should call her research assistant. So he did. She genially confessed she didn't know exactly where Miss Alexander had got her facts. So he called others: the International Red Cross, the U.N.'s World Health Organization, the State Department. None of them had the foggiest. So he called Vietnam expert Douglas Pike, who called Miss Alexander's assertion "absurd, really," and added that with a per capita income of $85 per year North Vietnam could hardly afford special services for anyone, as North Vietnamese documents themselves admit.

A few days later, Lofton found himself on television facing Sander Vanocur and Gloria Emerson, who were crowing over the North Vietnamese victory. I find it almost unfair to quote Miss Emerson, since on the subject of Vietnam she is, quite simply, unbalanced; but after all, she did feed it out, day after day, in the columns of the New York Times for three and a half years, where she ran the longest serialized atrocity story in American history.

Here (it wasn't hard) Lofton forced Miss Emerson to fly her banner. She was "very glad" the North Vietnamese won. She thought the North Vietnamese would, to be sure, run

"a very austere, well-ordered, regimented society which in the long run will profit a vast majority of the Vietnamese." (That's the kind of society Adolf Hitler ran.) John Lofton demurred, and the lady replied with an expletive deleted. Finally Lofton gave the lady one more absolutely straightforward chance:

J.L. "What did the North Vietnamese ever do in the war in Indochina that you disapprove of? Anything they ever did. Anything. Say anything bad about them. Did they do anything bad anywhere?"

Gloria. "In the south?"

J.L. "Anywhere in Indochina. Have the Communists done anything bad?"

Gloria. "Yes they have done things that I don't approve of."

J.L. "What? What? Name one (thing)."

Gloria. "I'm sorry that they put American prisoners of war under enormous duress. But I'm also sorry about the way the Americans treated the South Vietnamese..."

It is a complicated formulation, but there is no simpler way to put it: critics of the critics of the war in Vietnam have been profoundly right all those years they claimed that, in their hearts, the leaders of the anti-war movement were pro-North Vietnamese. John Lofton has done a fine job of teasing this admission out of one of their spokesmen.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

A Case For Preventive Medicine

MENLO PARK, CALIF. — Arthur Robinson would very much like a urine bank. It would cost $100,000 a year for five years, but he's dubious about getting a government grant for it. Too much fear that somebody like Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin will hear about it and ridicule it as another example of spendthrift lunacy.

Robinson is the assistant director of the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine here. He says the researchers at this small place of learning the employees number only 20 — have been able to break down urine into hundreds of elements that are present in greater and lesser degrees in all people's and all animal's specimens. The ratio of patterning of these elements may reveal whether a person is suffering from such apparently diverse diseases as multiple sclerosis or certain forms of cancer. More work needs doing before they can be sure.

The diagnostic advantages of this technique over biopsies or gruesome exploratory operations scarcely needs explaining. Robinson, who is a biochemist, believes these same urine analysis techniques can also be used to predict specifically who is going to fall victim to a particular disease. Unhappily for him and all of us, there is no way to see if he's right because, to test out the predictive accuracy of these procedures demands the existence of specimens of healthy people, and, as is so often the case under our present setup, there's precious little money or glory for studying health.

"In addition to basic research, the idea here is good, sound service," Robinson explains. "We're hoping for immediate results for human betterment... We have to say something even if we don't know the answer. People are aging, eating, suffering from degenerative diseases now."

It is for these reasons that the Institute has a small, one-doctor clinic attached to it and that in developing tests like its urine analysis techniques it stays away from the expensive exotica of medical hardware. One of the self-imposed ground rules here is that no perfected test may cost more than $10 to administer, and, even though this urine analysis is very sophisticated stuff compared to what the average doctor knows, it is all being done on machines presently in place in a large number of hospitals.

Robinson and his colleagues are just making them do things that ordinary doctors, who are practitioners, not scientists, don't know they can do. Such creativity is also in the spirit of a place where the budget is so modest that not only do the researchers have to build much of their own equipment but they often double in brass in several specialties.

Founded in 1973 by Linus Pauling as the Institute for Orthomolecular Medicine, its name was changed, not to gratify anybody's megalomania, but in hopes that the name Pauling would make the fund-raising a little easier. The hope is to raise about $10 million, enough to support about a half-dozen senior people of distinction and a larger number of promising young persons in research projects that will be out of reach of both congressional intellectual know-nothingism and conventional medical orthodoxy.

This is hard to do even with Pauling, a double Nobel prize winner, one for chemistry and one for peace. People are prone to prefer killing themselves in socially accepted ways rather than risk prolonged life and ridicule by trying something new which might work. To reassure the rich and feeble-minded that Pauling and his friends aren't crackpots, the Institute has assembled a Board of Associates that includes no less than 26 living Nobel Laureates in physics, chemistry, physiology and medicine. There are also other outstanding scientists on it who haven't made the trip to Stockholm. After all, Galileo died without one.

In the meantime, the Institute pursues its work as best it can with such grants and benefactions as come its way. Current research concerns mental disease, cancer and the molecular process of aging and how it may be postponed by proper diet.

Diet plays an important part in the work of the clinic, where they not only talk about preventive medicine, they attempt to practice it. The general feeling seems to be that a wise physician only prescribes as a last resort a medicine whose molecular structure isn't one normally occurring in the human organism.

Preventive medicine, at least in the primitive form our knowledge permits us to practice it, isn't very sexy. How can you report spectacular cures and great advances in the "wars" against cancer, tuberculosis, venereal disease, diabetes and angina pectoris if your patients die quietly in their sleep at age 95 of pure disillusionment at the follies of the younger members of their species?

This is a gross exaggeration, naturally, but it does underscore the idea that preventive medicine denies the unstated proposition that one can live like a high-risk candidate for any number of the new epidemic diseases and expect some doctor to come along and effect a routine cure.

Here at the Institute they do say, however, you can live 20 years longer than you're going to if you eat right, take your vitamins and your exercise and, for heaven's sake, abstain completely from all cigarettes and all sugar.

Freeman Readers Write

N-Lemons

Editor, The Freeman:

I would like to correct the U.P. story in the June 25th issue of your paper regarding the accidental release of hazardous radioactive gases from the Millstone atomic reactor No. 1 near Groton, Connecticut. This story explained that the release (18 times higher than permitted by Federal law) was due to the age of Millstone which the writer claimed dated back to 1953. In fact this plant started operation in 1971. (See A.E.C. list of reactors in publication of 1/29/74)

Despite its youth, Millstone has quite a history of breakdowns: closed from 9/72 to 3/73 (six months!), again on 4/17/73, on 4/27/73 and still again on 7/18/73. In a special article, the Wall Street Journal of 5/3/73 called Millstone "an atomic lemon". Only this past April '75 Northeast Utilities disclosed that on 3/30/75, 2300 gallons of radioactive liquid had been accidentally released from this reactor into Long Island Sound. But they did not report that a few days earlier 1,000 gallons of radioactive liquids had spilled on the floor of the boiler room, requiring 1500 employees to be sent home (N.Y. Times, 4/2/75).

Nor is Millstone the only young "lemon". To name just a few other reactors prone to accidents: Indian Point No 2 (completed 1973) closed 11/73 to 1/74; Palisades, Mich. (1971) shut down three months from 9/6/73; San Onofre, Cal. (1970) closed 10/21/73 to 1/74.

Ironically, Millstone is the plant that Lloyd Town Board members visited under the aegis of ASDA officials in June, 1974 to demonstrate the desirability of a nuclear facility. True, the tax benefits in nearby Waterford are good. But one wonders, in view of these dangerous radioactive gas and water leaks, if the plant's neighbors are now satisfied with their trade of dollars for safety.

Ironie

Editor, The Freeman:

Recently, an article appeared in the Freeman promoting Planned Parenthood's present fund raising campaign. Since then, billboards have appeared and television commercials have been presented for Planned Parenthood. All have the same slogan, "...because we love children, support Planned Parenthood."

I find this slogan ironic since part of Planned Parenthood's program encourages abortion, especially in the case of unwed mothers.

How can anyone state they love someone when they encourage the destruction of the very one they profess to love?

Kathleen M. Beyea
Kingston

Defaced

Editor, The Freeman:

This year, Planned Parenthood chose the motto, "BECAUSE WE LOVE CHILDREN", to emphasize the positive role it plays in bringing high quality medical care to women of child-bearing age. It is precisely because we love children that we care about the health of the women who will bear them. It is because we believe that every child should be wanted and loved that we encourage women to plan their pregnancies, so that they can be in the best possible mental and physical condition for the childbearing experience.

To bring this message to the public, Planned Parenthood employed the use of two billboards in Ulster County. Recently, one of these was disgracefully defaced. This behavior on the part of some disgruntled citizens who don't happen to agree with Planned Parenthood's goals seems particularly reprehensible at a time when we are preparing to reaffirm the high ideals upon which our nation was founded. The freedom to hold different opinions, the freedom to state ideas without fear of censure, the right to decide one's own best course of action—all were violated in this irresponsible act. For these reasons, even more than the illegality of defacing private property, its perpetrators need to be publicly told, "FOR SHAME!"

Peace Corps

Editor, The Freeman:

(The following letter was published in the Washington Post on June 12, 1975. It was written in response to Jack Anderson's column on the Peace Corps that appeared in the Post on May 31, 1975.)

Jack Anderson's hatchet job on the Peace Corps is an insult to the thousands of volunteers who have devoted themselves in a sincere effort to help others.

I have been involved with the Peace Corps from the start, as a volunteer and administrator, and later as a freelance writer and photographer. One of the most impressive characteristics of the agency was a continuous effort to obtain feedback from the volunteers in the field for purposes of evaluating and improving programs. No one should be surprised that there have been many problems in conducting this innovative, complex and sensitive operation. These problems were invariably brought forth in program conferences and written reports by volunteers, and it appears that Mr. Anderson has obtained some of these materials.

In a remarkable example of irresponsible journalism, he has taken selected comments from volunteers and generalized about the entire program, without any mention of the countless Peace Corps successes over the years.

The Peace Corps is alive and well, it is both idealistic and pragmatic, and it is doing its job. As a nation we should be grateful that this is so.

Clarification

Editor, The Freeman:

The report of the County Legislature meeting of June 19 appeared in the June 20 issue of the Freeman containing the following statement: "The Board also took up programs for the aging . . . providing a $43,920 appropriation for the newly established office for the aging . . . state aid for the office for the aging amounts to $11,460 leaving a total cost to the county of $32,460."

This statement should read that a total of $32,460 was appropriated by the county for all the programs for the elderly. Of this total $11,460 is for the state-county recreation program, $7,500 is for the nutrition program and $13,500, which is the remainder, would be the amount appropriated for the county office for the aging.

The county office for the aging is a separate entity. It is established under Title III of the Older Americans Act of 1965 — amended in 1973 to cover the area offices. The funds are federal and there are $73,000 (in round figures) earmarked for use in Ulster County once the county office is established. This office can coordinate existing agencies and programs as well as initiate new programs to help meet some of the pressing needs of many of the elderly. To mention a few areas of great need there are housing, transportation, nutrition, and medical care. Belated as the adoption of the office is we should rejoice that it is coming into being to serve the 23,000 older citizens in Ulster County.

The nutrition program was established under Title VII of the Older Americans Act. It is federally funded with the Federal Government bearing 91 percent of the cost of the program. It is now and has been functioning effectively under the aegis of Ulster County Community Action with the state office for aging as overseer. A county office for the aging can work closely with the program and help expand the services.

The recreation program which obtains $11,460 from both state and county is a separate item from the office for the aging. Except for $2,700 of the total $22,920 which is designated recreation it is administered by the Senior Citizens Alliance of Ulster County and is serving primarily the recreational desires of the 3,000 or so members of the 28 senior citizen clubs in Ulster County. $2,700 of this fund is used for the participants in the nutrition program for recreational purposes.

With the hope that this will be enlightening to the readers who were puzzled by the large (!) amount appropriated for the office for the aging, I am,

Ramada Inn and the new Steakout Restaurant in Kingston have announced the start of a Summer Swim Program — open to all families and singles — that will be held every day, rain or shine, at the Ramada Pool off Route 28. Ramada officials have stated that area residents are invited to use the pool, and then later enjoy the extensive menu of steaks and seafood that are available at the restaurant. Additional information concerning the Summer Swim Program can be obtained by contacting Ramada Inn.

Mack's Seniors Club

MOONACHIE, N.J.

A new Senior Citizens Bonus Club has been created by the Mack Drug Company which operates a chain of drug stores in New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey.

In an announcement this week, Kenneth Chane, corporate executive vice president, said, "The club has been formed primarily to help those living in their golden years, and," he added, "the club is unique in what it offers to members."

Benefits to club members, he said, include special consideration on prescriptions, discounts on all Mack's brand items, discounts on all convalescent aids, and other special discount privileges year 'round.

"Mack's is the only drug chain with such a diversified plan for senior citizens," Chane explained. He said, "There are no tricks or gimmicks. Mack's just doesn't do business that way." That's what makes the club so unique, the company official commented.

The club is free to all senior citizens, Chane pointed out. They just fill out an application, available at all Mack stores, and their cards are returned by mail. There is no obligation and nothing to buy, he emphasized.

"We are delighted to add this to our list of customer services," Chane continued, "and we sincerely hope that a large number of senior citizens will participate as members of the new club."

In the Wild West of Mexico

ACAPULCO, Mexico (UPI) — Nobody knows for sure how many persons, excluding tourists, carry guns in Guerrero State, a region sometimes dubbed "the Wild West" of Mexico. Some Mexicans claim that almost everybody over 12 years of age "picks a rod" in Guerrero.

One man who began carrying a gun at age 11 is the state governor, Ruben Figueroa, 74. And he still carries it today, bulging prominently from beneath the shirt-tail of his "guayabera" or jacket.

"I've been in the habit of carrying a gun since I was 11 years old because my mother taught me that in this world it is necessary to take care of yourself," Figueroa said.

A barrel-chested man with a strong voice, Figueroa currently is feuding with local newspapers which accuse him of intimidation and trying to control the press. One editor even claimed that Figueroa threatened to "eliminate" him if he continues publishing critical stories about Acapulco, a Pacific coast tourist resort that is Guerrero's best known city.

The controversy with the press may be one of Figueroa's lesser problems. He governs a state which he admits is rampant with drug runners, and whose population is mainly illiterate, as well as economically inactive.

The state has also produced two of Mexico's best known self-styled guerrilla leaders, Genaro Vazquez Rojas and Lucio Cabanas. Vazquez was killed in 1972 and Cabanas last December.

Cabanas' demise came only three months after the Mexican army rescued Figueroa, then a senator, from three months' captivity by the guerrilla leader.

Figueroa surprised newsmen recently by disclosing that his family had paid 25 million pesos ($2 million) ransom to Cabanas, who had been asking 50 million. He said $1.12 million of the money paid out was recovered by the army at the time of his rescue. He said another $40,000 has subsequently retrieved but did not give any details.

What became of the remaining $800,000 paid to Cabanas remains a mystery.

However, Figueroa said he had reason to suppose that an unidentified priest, who was acting as intermediary in making the ransom payment, may have kept $240,000.

Figueroa said the payment to Cabanas was made by his family with the help of friends after President Luis Echeverria flatly ruled out negotiations of any kind by the government with the guerrilla leader.

In private life Figueroa owns a big truck transport company and is part owner of an interstate passenger bus line.

He was elected governor last December, his candidacy sustained by the powerful Revolutionary Institutional Party even while he was being held by Cabanas.

Figueroa recently estimated that 60 per cent—about 1.4 million of the state's two million population—is illiterate.

He also said that Guerrero is plagued by widespread, although clandestine, production of marijuana. Drug traffickers supplied Cabanas with arms in return for help with their operations, he said.

Crime statistics in Guerrero are difficult to obtain. But last January one local newspaper carried an estimate by a Mexican expert in public administration who said that among the member states of the United Nations "Mexico occupies first place in crime and the state of Guerrero generates 50 per cent of it."

Figueroa said one reason he goes armed is to guard against possible aggression by some marijuanero, a "hop-head" deranged by drugs.

The Mosquito 'Sexy Insect'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — If you've never thought of the mosquito as the sexual superstar of the insect world, Dr. Lewis Nielsen would like a moment of your time.

The male bug's main function, he says, is to propagate its own species.

But Nielsen, a professor of biology at the University of Utah who has spent 30 years studying the mosquito, also says it is populating the woods with wildflowers.

His current concern is the insect's function as pollinator. He says preliminary studies suggest the bug makes a major contribution to the breeding of certain flowers.

If so, its role in the sex life of the woodlands bridges genus and species.

"All the male does is just feed, swarm and try to take care of the females," he says. "It's too bad it's all instinctual. I don't really think they enjoy it."

Nielsen and an assistant will try during field studies this summer in Utah's Uinta and Wasatch mountains to determine just how great a contribution the bug makes to pollination of wildflowers as it feeds on their nectar.

"Perhaps mosquitos aren't as appreciated as they might be," he says. "But of course, nobody appreciates them anyway."

Nielsen says his studies in the past two years suggest some species of flowers depend "very heavily" on the mosquito for pollination.

The male, he says, does not suck blood and can survive only as long as it can live off the nectar of flowers. As it passes from blossom to blossom, it picks up pollen here and drops it there.

He says the bug's dual role of propagating its own species and populating the woods with flowers "so far is just an assumption, but I think it's a reasonable one."

Nielsen says female mosquitos, who normally feed on blood, also may play a role in pollination.

"The females are just as obligated to feed on nectar for a period of from a week to about 10 days between their emergence from the larval or pupal stage until they begin sucking blood.

County Asked to Return Fees

By Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON
Ulster County is being asked to return $100 fees collected from 21 farm labor and migrant labor camps in the county by the Ulster County Board of Health.

The board of health recently decided that the fees collected for permits to operate the camps were "excessive" and has waived such collections and recommended to the county legislature that the fees be returned.

If the legislature agrees to refund the one at its July 10 meeting, $2,100 will be returned to 19 camp owners of 21 camps.

The board will also consider a request for additional personnel at the Ulster County Jail. Action on the proposal was expected at the June meeting of the legislature but it was postponed until now.

Sheriff Thomas Mayone will appear before the board to request that the following be hired: one deputy to work as an auto mechanic that the following be hired: one sergeant to serve as a training officer at a salary of $9,000 a year; one deputy to work as an auto mechanic at a salary of $7,800 annually and 10 deputies at $7,800 a year for a total of $94,800 for all the posts.

A recommendation that the additional personnel be added to the staff was made by the New York State Department of Correction following a staffing and manpower analysis at the jail. The move was also recommended by the Sheriff's Committee of the legislature, Clifford W. Snyder (R-Dist.1), chairman.

The county board's Finance Committee, headed by Legislature Chairman Peter J.

Savago (R-Dist.8), is asking the legislature to consider participation in the Intergovernment Personnel Act Program which allows for the employment of a trained personnel technician in a regular budgeted position for one year.

Savago said that there is an acute shortage of personnel technicians available in various municipalities of the state and that in recognition of the shortage the New York State Civil Service Commission, through the Intergovernmental Personnel Act, will train persons meeting certain educational requirements and who will agree to accept employment in a municipality as a personnel technician after a training period of one year.

Savago said the personnel department of the county is in need of a trained personnel technician and recommends that the county participate in the program. The salary, to be determined by the Finance Committee would be included in the county's 1976 budget.

The legislature chairman will also recommend to the board that it approve the reappointment of Raymond W. Garraghan to the Ulster County Community College Board of Trustees for a nine-year term and appoint Legislator George Sisti Jr. (R-Dist.8) of Plattekill, to the New York State Fish and Wildlife Management Board for the balance of this year, filling an existing vacancy.

A vote on two proposals relating to who should be able to address the legislature at its regular monthly sessions and for how long and at what point on the legislative agenda is expected at Thursday's meeting.

Two opposing pieces of legislation are offered, one by Democratic Legislators Louis M. Klein of Dist. 6 and Brian R. White of Dist. 8 who proposed that 30 minutes of public comment be permitted at the beginning of the 8 p.m. session of the board with the time to speak equally allocated between those requesting opportunity to speak.

Another proposal comes from Charles Scala (R-Dist.1) which would allow for speakers at the 4 p.m. session, as is now the custom or, if at the 8 p.m. session, for a maximum of 30 minutes with the amount of time divided among the speakers with no one speaking more than 10 minutes.

Scala also stipulates that speakers only address themselves to legislation before the board and to preclude any electioneering, nominees of either party would be denied the floor between the months of July and October.

Other legislation to come before the board concerns a request for a feasibility study in connection with the possible establishment of an Industrial Development Board, a resolution setting Aug. 14 at 2 p.m. as the date for a public hearing on the Ulster County Community College budget for 1975-76 and another resolution proclaiming the week of July 21 as Volunteer Firemen Week.

Search On For Woodstock Man

By Matt Spireng

SAUGERTIES

A search continued today for a Woodstock man who police said almost ran down two pedestrians in front of the Saugerties Town Hall early today and then fled into a wooded area following a high speed chase.

A warrant charging Eugene Labascoia with first degree reckless endangerment has been issued, Saugerties Town Police said.

Incidents leading to the issuing of the warrant began shortly after midnight today when a car, allegedly driven by Labascoia, nearly struck two pedestrians and a town police car in front of the town hall, police said.

A chase ensued, which ended at the intersection of Route 212 and Railroad Avenue when Labascoia's auto ran off the road. According to police, Labascoia and a male passenger in his car fled into a wooded area. Two female passengers, both teenagers, remained in the car and were the ones who identified Labascoia as the driver, police said.

Police, including sheriff's deputies, Woodstock and Town of Ulster Constables, State Police, and Saugerties Village and Town Police undertook a four-hour search of the woods, but failed to find Labascoia.

According to Saugerties Town Police, the man who fled with Labascoia is not facing charges.

Meanwhile, in other area police matters:

Laurie Phillips (nee Shorser), 24, of Ohayo Mountain Road, Woodstock died Wednesday at Benedictine Hospital of massive head injuries sustained Tuesday afternoon in an auto accident on Route 209 near Neighborhood Road.

Mrs. Phillips, who was reportedly only recently married, was initially identified as Laurie Shorser. Her death has been ruled accidental.

Mrs. Phillips' car ran off Route 209 and slammed into a bridge abutment at about 2 p.m.

Three burglary arrests were reported by police agencies in Ulster County.

Kingston Police charged Theodore Pugliese, 24, of 196 Clinton Avenue with third degree burglary early today after he allegedly broke into Bernal American Inc., 154 Clinton Avenue.

According to police, a patrol car had just left the area of the auto firm when a neighbor called headquarters to report hearing glass breaking. Police returned, found a broken window and allegedly caught Pugliese inside the building.

Highland State Police charged Paul Moreno, 24, of Brooklyn with third degree burglary Wednesday morning after he allegedly entered a barn on North Elting Corners Road in the Town of Lloyd and was spotted by the owner leaving with horse equipment.

Hurley State Police BCI investigators charged Edward Hayes, 21, of Box 189 Port Ewen with third degree burglary in connection with a break-in and vandalism at the Lake Katrine School last July. Investigators said the arrest was the result of evidence developed by the state police scientific laboratory in Albany.

Arraigned before Ulster Town Justice Arthur A. Reilly, Hayes pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of criminal mischief and was ordered to make restitution of one-third of the damage caused in the break-in, which was estimated at $2,058. Police explained that two others involved in the break-in are already in prison serving sentences for other crimes.

Businessmen to Protect Retail Merchant Interests

KINGSTON
Disturbed by the increased support given to consumer-oriented legislation, the Uptown Businessmen's Association (UBA) has embarked on a program of its own to protect the interests of the retail merchant.

Lengthy discussion on that topic at the UBA's breakfast meeting Wednesday was prompted by Stanley London, who pointed out that the New York State Assembly recently passed legislation which would require retail merchants to give cash-paying customers a discount equivalent to the service charge the merchants must pay for accepting third party credit cards.

London noted that the law would either result in increased retail prices (to pay for the required discount) or the elimination of credit cards (to avoid the discount). Either way, said London, the retailers and subsequently the customers would be penalized.

Noting that Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey (D-101) voted in favor of the legislation, the businessmen emphasized the importance of regular meetings with political representatives in order to have their feelings known on particular subjects.

"This whole business of consumerism is getting a little out of hand," commented UBA president Glen Stampfle, "we've been negligent as a body in keeping our representatives informed of the consequences of some of the legislation that they vote on." Stampfle proposed that the association form a political action committee that would keep in touch with elected officials and express the viewpoints of the business community.

UBA member Ted Weiner, in the meantime, suggested that the group send a committee to Albany to meet personally with representatives on the proposed credit card legislation, and other pending bills.

Along that line, Len Cane, executive vice-president of the Ulster County Chamber of Commerce, announced that the chamber will sponsor a breakfast meeting on Sept. 16 which will deal specifically with legislation that would affect retailers. And Cane also announced that Mayor Francis R. Koenig, the Democratic candidate for reelection, and William Darling, his Republican challenger, have tentatively agreed to debate the issues at an Oct. 15 breakfast meeting.

In other topics discussed at Wednesday's meeting: • It was announced that new Bicentennial flags will be flown uptown on July 4. The businessmen will make a decision afterwards on whether the flags should continue to be flown on a daily basis through 1976.

• A progress report on the Pike Plan revealed that canopy work on the west side of North Front Street is expected to begin shortly, even though the installation of sewer lines in that area is continuing.

• The UBA's annual sidewalk sale July 11 and 12 was discussed. Activities on the 12th (Saturday) will include a concert by the Kingston Indians, a display of fire apparatus, a sketch by the Stockaders and a square dance demonstration. Wall Street will be closed to traffic that day.

School Association Slate

New officers of St. Peter's School Parents Association of Rosendale were installed at a recent year-end meeting of the organization. Mrs. William Ferry, (L) outgoing president, passes the chain of command to George Goodwin, incoming president. Other officers are Mrs. Larry Craig (C) vice president, Mrs. Calvert Harvey, secretary and Mrs. David Keefe, treasurer. A salute to eighth grade graduates was a feature of the program. (Freeman photo)

Koenig Defends 'Street Record'

KINGSTON
Mayor Francis R. Koenig will spend some $32,000 budgeted last January for the city's 1975 street program on the repair of Main Street, East Chester Street and Tompkins Street.

The budgeted money is separate from the $125,000 bond issue approved by the Common Council on Tuesday night for major street repair although a $6,374 "down payment" will come out of the $50,000 Koenig budgeted for streets last January.

The mayor has come under heavy criticism for budgeting only $50,000 of a $169,000 street program but he defended himself today by pointing to the record of one of his predecessors, John J. Schwenk.

Former Mayor Schwenk, Koenig said, bonded out $480,000 for his street program during a four-year administration from Jan. 1, 1962 to Dec. 31, 1965.

Koenig said he has bonded out $332,000 during his six years in office which began on Jan. 1, 1970. In 1972 he bonded out $69,000. Last year he bonded out $144,000 which included the experimental planning program and this year's total will be $125,000, Koenig said.

He plans to spend $13,875 for work on Main Street from Fair to Wall; $10,280 for Tomkins Street and $8,046 for East Chester Street from Hasbrouck to Hemlock. With the down payment on the $125,000 bond issue subtracted, that leaves him $11,425 for work on Mary's Avenue.

Connellie Is Sworn In As Head of State Police

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — William G. Connellie, a 30-year veteran of the New York City police force, has officially taken over as superintendent of the state police.

Gov. Hugh L. Carey swore in tall, white-haired Connellie Wednesday evening, two hours after the Senate confirmed the nominee by a nearly unanimous voice vote.

Sen. James H. Donovan, R-Chadwick, the only dissenting vote, claimed Connellie would take no stronger action than his predecessor had to remove a band of militant Indians camped on state land in his district.

Connellie, 54, is an assistant chief of the New York City police. He began with that force in 1946 as a patrolman and worked his way up through the ranks.

Connellie, who holds 13 citations for bravery, will receive $47,800 a year in the new post.

He succeeds William E. Kirwan, 63, who resigned. Kirwan was named to the post in 1967 by then-Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Although Sen. Ralph J. Marino, R-Syosset, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, praised Connellie, saying he had "a great record," Donovan said, "The nominee is not determined to enforce all the laws of the state vigorously and equally."

"There is a flagrant violation of our law taking place and the state police are doing nothing about it," Donovan said. "The nominee says he will do nothing about it. This is a form of anarchy."

Donovan has vigorously campaigned to have Carey or a state agency remove the Indians, who claim Mohawk heritage and say a Revolutionary era treaty gives them title to the 612-acre former girls' camp near Moss Lake. Two persons passing the encampment in automobiles, including a 9-year-old girl, have been wounded by gunfire since the Indians took over in May, 1974.

Donovan charged that while state police have been denied access to the encampment, he has been told the occupants have amassed "50,000 rounds of military ammunition" and "they have a pillbox set up, presumably heavily fortified."

Connellie, however, said any decision involving the Indians "involves several state agencies" and would be "a policy decision" by the governor.

He said he had heard nothing of Donovan's charges about weapons at the site but would make the occupation a matter of top priority.

Connellie and his wife, Marie, live in Queens but will move to Albany. They have four daughters.

Carey Heads For Shelter

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Depending upon your political stripes, Gov. Hugh L. Carey has either signed a summer lease for four rooms below a dentist's office or a two-story office building on Shelter Island.

State Republican Chairman Richard M. Rosenbaum claims Carey will move his office and key personnel to the resort area for the summer. But the Democratic governor insists he will use it on weekends when he happens to be at his summer residence nearby.

Carey's plan to lease the office space on the resort island off Long Island was disclosed Wednesday in a news release from Rosenbaum.

"Despite the governor's pious promises to stay on the job in Albany," Rosenbaum said, "this summer, anyone wanting to see the governor will face a trip by ferry boat off of Long Island."

The GOP leader termed the plan "a nose-thumbing gesture at the state's taxpayers," and said the taxpayers should not have to bear "such needless extra costs."

Carey's press office issued a "fact sheet" on the Shelter Island summer rental "a few hours after Rosenbaum's statement was distributed."

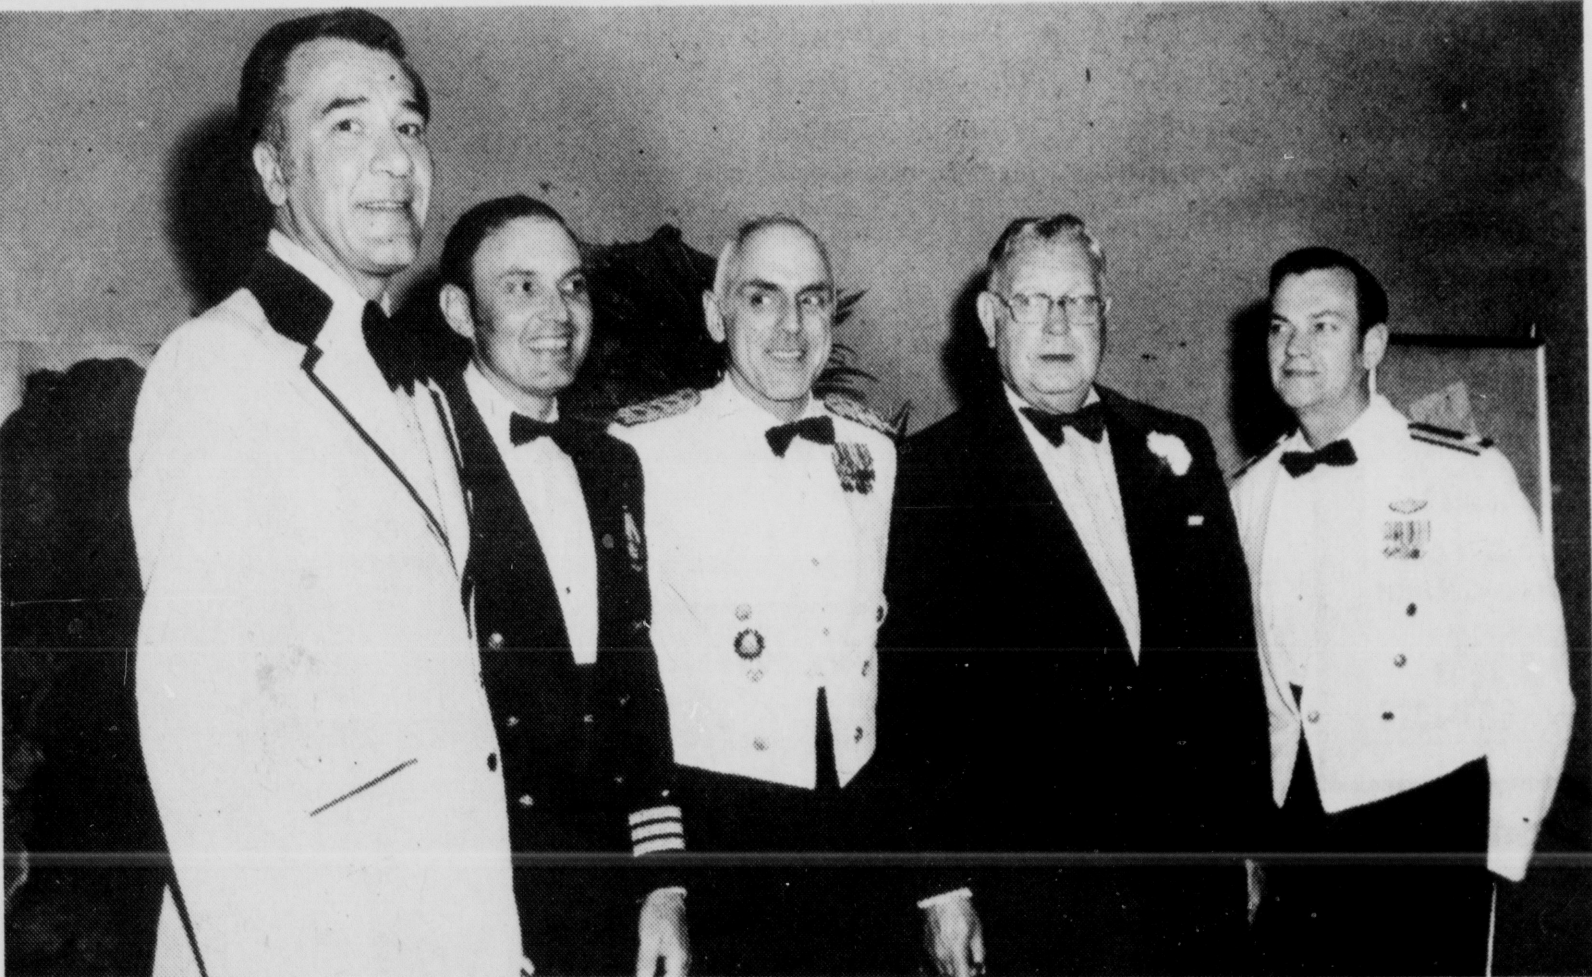

"The state is leasing the first floor of a two-story frame house on Shelter Island for use by the State Police during July and August at a rate of $350 a month, for a total of $700," the governor's statement said.

"The rooms will be used primarily as quarters for security men assigned to the governor and accompanying him on any weekends he might spend with his children..."

"Research of the facts demonstrated that it would be far cheaper to rent rooms than to put them up in regular hotels during their visits to the island. One room will also be set aside as a weekend office for the governor while he is with his family."

"The state will not provide either residential or office space on Shelter Island for any staff aides of the governor," the statement said.

The building is located at 44 South Ferry Road.

Steuben Society Guests Are Welcomed

Fourth Annual Montreal Mode, A Fashion Show of Canada's Finest Designs

By Dorothy A. Narel

NEW YORK—The Canadian Club, a turn-of-the-century mansion at Fifth Avenue and East 60th Street was designed by Stanford White. His mastery of design was evident everywhere in the sheer beauty of the building's hand carved ceilings, high three story staircases outlined with plush red velvet and marble walls. It all made a very unique setting Friday, June 27 for the Quebec Government's fourth annual Montreal Mode—a fashion show of Canada's finest designs by creative, enterprising young designers.

First Time the popular fashion show, "Montreal Mode," was staged in New York.

It was the first time that the now popular fashion show—Montreal Mode—was staged in New York. It meant flying the whole caravan from Montreal to Manhattan—models, mentors and merchandise. It was a brand new fashion approach, according to Edward J. Ives, Market Development Consultant for the Quebec government, who also called the occasion an "exciting change in our cast of designs and designers."

The American Press was attending at the invitation of Quebec's Minister Guy Saint-Pierre and they saw the best "from the north country." There was a decided oriental influence as well as a touch of Arctic creations.

The sleep and loungewear collections were fascinating with groups of shimmery beauties in colors of pale peach, blue and orange. There were mechanic's jumpsuits, big-striped caftans and beautiful versions of the hooded, toggled duffle and the common bathrobe which looked anything but common.

Designers also introduced a revival—the bedcap—some like turbans that swathe a la East Indian and beribboned sashes that dazzle a la Isadora Duncan.

In addition to the recall of the bedcap is the revival of the dress with particular emphasis upon smock dresses, bias-cut versions with lots of flare, and narrow little dresses concealed under long, skinny cardigans.

"Restaurant" dresses were shown for the cocktail hour. These were black dresses in a new mood. They were shown in wool crepe, wool jersey and panne velvets. And they oozed glamour with their decollete necklines that dip and curve front or back.

Lush, plush fabrics were shown for evening wear. As one designer put it: "Body-touching but not body hugging." Designers used fabrics like matte jersey, chiffon, lots of (chiffon), lame, gauzy wool, soft printed silks and wool georgettes.

There was everything from a shimmering lame skimmer trimmed with fluttering ostrich feathers and the demure counterpoint of a black velvet evening jumper over a ladylike silk shirt.

What Canadians do with leather and suede is unbelievable! The skins are so supple they are shown in slim dresses and suits as well as big coats with heavy stitching in the European tradition outlining yokes and accentuating seaming details.

Coat length are mid-calf and many are trimmed with notched collars in long haired furs. Male models sported coats with lining of hamster, marmot and raccoon.

For the sports-minded, flared culottes made the scene. They are a clever compromise between pants and skirts while circle skirts and kimono-sleeved tops for the after five but casual occasions.

Canadians also take tremendous pride in their fur industry and well they might—they are beautiful.

Best "from the north country." Decided oriental influence, touch of Arctic creations.

Furs for daytime and evening were shown. There were off-beat color combinations including forest green, midnight blue, red brick, sunlight, sand, cinnamon and copper all of which were used very dramatically in muskrat, beaver, fox and raccoon wraps.

Drawing applause were the furs featuring shading or chevroning using the internationally known Debo process. These were used on Persian broadtail and sheared beaver.

Quebec's fur story also includes capes—great and swirling—some tubed and vaguely Oriental.

Given the opportunity to present awards for outstanding creations, these would be LIFE'S selections:

MICHEL ROBICHAUD, designing for French Maid Lingerie, who says that "Every occasion—even a quiet evening at home or the simple act of going to bed, calls for a certain amount of style. An award for his white and apricot luxurious and glamorous collection of night and loungewear. Also for his one-piece dresses with matching wool crochet shawls.

JOHN WARDEN, designing for Molyclair, who creates at-home fashions for women that spell "romance". An award for his sparkling silver and cream collection, the Far Eastern caftans and low decollete necklines on flowing evening pajamas and long, easy dresses.

LEO CHEVALIER, designing for Van Essa, an award for his mechanic's suit, and terrycloth velour caftans in a choice of colors—pale peach, blue and orange.

VALI DUBSKY for Valli Designs, for her evening dresses of ruffled-edge silk chiffon and shimmering lame skimmers dramatized with fluttering ostrich feathers.

DONALD RICHER, designing for I. Richer and Son, an award for his dramatic fur capes.

ROBERT CHERNIN, designing for Aljac Sportswear, an award for his natural and earth tones used in his light, silky sues.

MARIELLE FLEURY, designing for Sport Togs, an award for her winter overcoats of quilted cotton poplin in dark forest colors relieved by bands of brightly colored floral braid. She is Quebec's answer for seasonal wear.

LILLY DEE, designing for Adventure and Activi-Dee, whose fashions are partly European, partly American but born and bred in Quebec. An award for her flared culottes, a great compromise between pants and skirts.

Leo Chevalier combines winter colors, in subtle variations of burgundy and rose, in his bias flared evening costume. The casual jacket has layered cape sleeves. From his Brodtkin collection.

Donald Ventura uses Donegal tweed for one of his neat and narrow three piece suits in the Hardware collection.

Francine Vandellac, la tricoteuse de Quebec, uses pale beige wool from Beauce county for her dark edged knitted coat. Patch pockets, wide cuffs and a tasselled hood are import details.

Handknit wools and Donegal tweeds are combined by Leo Chevalier in his contemporary sportswear collection for Montroy. Here a tweed cape curves over a front-pleated skirt and a long narrow cardigan buttons over a silk shirt.

Licking the dasher from freshly made ice cream for July 4th Ice Cream Social at Port Ewen Methodist Church are Lee Ann LeMay and Lara Sleight. (Van Heusen photos)

Freezing the first batch of strawberry ice cream for the Friday afternoon and evening social is Susan Glickman, who has discovered that in addition to the usual ingredients of heavy cream, eggs, sugar and fresh strawberries, one needs plenty of ice, salt and lots of muscle power to turn the crank to produce the real old-fashioned, homemade ice cream that grandma remembers so well.

Meeting on the veranda of Deanie's Towne Tavern in Woodstock are members of the committee of the Performing Arts of Woodstock's sale and talent hunt scheduled for Deanie's parking lot, Woodstock, Saturday, July 6. Discussing plans are Jo McKim Chalmers (L), Steve Callahan, standing, talent scout and PAW director; Bernard Pauker and Eleanor Schlomann. (Freeman photo)

Planning for PAW Sale, Talent Hunt

The parking lot of Deanie's Town Tavern, at the junction of Route 375 and 212 in Woodstock, will be the locale for a Performing Arts of Woodstock rummage sale next Saturday, July 6.

The event will go on at 10 a.m. and continue until 3.

PAW hopes to balance its production costs not covered by its grant from The New York State Council on the Arts, principally the royalties paid to playwrights, with the sale of interesting objects, books, clothes and household articles. There will also be homemade baked foods, coffee and lemonade.

Present at the sale will be, for PAW, an innovation, a roving talent scout. Steve Callahan, director of many of PAW's productions, including the all time favorite, the Victorian melodrama, RAGS TO RICHES, will be on the scene with his cassette to record, for future PAW productions, speaking and singing voices. Callahan hopes to discover more of the talents existing in this, and surrounding areas. Several plays chosen for production by PAW have had to be postponed or canceled due to an insufficient number of players needed to complete the cast.

If you wish to contribute anything to the sale call the PAW or bring to the shed next to the Fellowship Hall of the Lutheran Church on Mill Hill Road, in Woodstock.

Exposed Midriff in Church Invites Devil

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know if there is a dress code for church. What is permitted and what isn't?

My sister, who is 29 and married, came to church last Sunday wearing a halter-type dress that showed about three inches of her bare middle.

This sister came to church a few minutes after Mom was seated, and when Mom saw Sis in this outfit, she burst into tears and didn't lift up her head for the whole service. Afterwards, Mom went home and cried all day. She says she is sure Sis is going to the devil.

Maybe I'm of another generation (I am 22), but I didn't think my sister did anything so terrible by coming to church dressed that way. The church is very hot and has no air conditioning. Maybe if the church officials let people dress more comfortably, they would have better attendance in the summer. What do you think?

WARM IN GA.
DEAR WARM: Common sense and a little old-fashioned respect for a house of worship is all the dress code necessary. Your sister shouldn't have exposed her middle, your mother shouldn't have cried all day and all the churches in Georgia should be air-conditioned to discourage bare middles — and the devil.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me some of the most common clues to look for if I already suspect (which I do) that my wife is meeting another man somewhere during the day?

I am not an overly suspicious man, so you will not be generating trouble where none exists.

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

In this case, simply asking her will not help.

SUSPICIOUS IN DALLAS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: If a woman gets all dressed up to go "shopping," comes home slightly late and out of breath, has no packages and is wearing her pantyhose inside out, I'd wonder where she's been.

DEAR ABBY: Another solution to "Prune Face," that doctor's wife who wanted a face-lift, but whose husband said no because he didn't want her to look like his "daughter." Persuade the good doctor to join his wife and get a face-lift, too! We'd just as soon you didn't use our names, but it's no secret to our friends and family that my wife and I had a "joint job." We shared the same room and nurses — and were delighted with the results.

We were in our mid-50s at the time. It didn't hurt a bit except when I wrote out the check.

"Do the best with what you've got (left)," we say.
SINALOA, MEXICO

DEAR ABBY: My girl friend and I are both 20. We plan to get married in three months, but we have a problem.

My girl friend has a child by a previous marriage, and she wants to wait until after we are married to tell my parents about it. She says she's afraid if my folks know about it now, they won't like her.

I say she should tell them now — before we get married. What do you think?

CHILD PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: I agree with you. There is no reason for her to try to hush up a previous marriage and child.

If she does, your parents will feel betrayed and will not like her for certain.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WORRIED SICK IN CHICAGO": Forget it. If she could really see into the future, she wouldn't be sitting in a cold water flat in Chicago charging $2 a fortune.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Selection of Collectors' Sitting Rooms Now at Jarvis Gallery

Jarvis Gallery, housed in the former Marsh Museum at 2 Broadview Road, Woodstock, is introducing a new concept for art and antique lovers. A personalized, intimate atmosphere featuring a selection of Collectors' Sitting Rooms.

Gallery director Trudy Jarvis told LIFE: "This newly created atmosphere in the gallery is a far cry from any cold, sterile room with painting displayed on blank walls. It helps demonstrate how good art and art objects can blend into a warm, inviting area."

The internationally known art dealer and decorator, also feels the gallery affords residents and visitors an opportunity to enjoy the former Marsh Museum which once housed famous American folk art. The folk art is now in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

Of particular interest to architectural enthusiasts would be the stately authentic Georgian structure which separates the gallery from the Jarvis residence under the same roof. The separating wall is an Irish palladium doorway, circa 1760, imported from Dublin. The doorway is complete with lace fanlight, side lights, ancient iron lock and carved lintel.

The oak-timbered gallery has a cathedral ceiling and its broad balcony overlooks the groups of collectors' sitting rooms.

Mrs. Jarvis still places a great deal of emphasis upon her art collection and sculpturing as well as leading Woodstock artists. She has a unique collection of works by Franklin Alexander, Lesta Gaba, the Milton Avery Family as well as the French impressionists.

The gallery director has also collected important antiques from famous families such as Harry Payne, Averill Harriman and a list of French Provincial furniture dating from 1770.

For culture's sake and sheer enjoyment, many will find Jarvis Gallery a "must" this summer. Jarvis Gallery is open to the public, free of charge, every day except Wednesdays from 1-6 p.m.

A typical Collector's Sitting Room as pictured in Jarvis Gallery in Woodstock. The gallery is open to the public every day except Wednesdays from 1-6 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Why HI-EFFICIENCY?

To make one model more efficient than another, it must have larger, more costly component parts. General Electric's Hi-Efficiency Model air conditioners have 3 basic elements that differ substantially from regular GE models: the fan motor has more massive, higher-efficiency windings; there is greater cooling surface on the evaporator and condenser; and it has a larger, heavier capacitor.

113th Victim Of Jet Crash

NEW YORK (UPI) — The death toll of the Eastern Air Lines jet crash last week rose to 113 today with the death in Jamaica Hospital of a Louisiana chemist.

A spokesman for the hospital identified the victim as Norman Van Winkle, 37, of Lake Charles, La., who worked for the Olin Chemical Co.

The spokesman said Van Winkle died at about 4:50 a.m. "There is no precise cause of death as yet," the spokesman said, but Van Winkle suffered burns over 50 per cent of his body and broken legs in the crash last Tuesday of Eastern Flight 66.

The crash was the worst single-plane disaster in U.S. history. Van Winkle's death leaves 11 survivors of the 727 crash, a number of them with severe burns.

NAACP Lauds Move

KINGSTON — The Ulster County Chapter of the NAACP has termed the Kingston Schools Consolidated Board of Education's 5-4 decision to halt condemnation proceedings on land acquisition for the new high school "a commendable act."

"However, this statement is not intended to convey that we support the members (in the majority) in total," said Everett Hodge, NAACP president. "It is quite possible that we will be opposing them on other issues."

Hodge noted that the NAACP opposed the construction of a new high school "from the beginning" and that it still advocates the inclusion of MIM Junior High School as part of the high school complex to alleviate serious overcrowding.

Fourth For Vets

ALBANY — Volunteers and their organizations have chosen a bicentennial theme to give patients in the Albany Veterans Administration Hospital an old fashioned Fourth of July.

Some of the offerings for hospitalized vets: hot dogs and soda to the music of a band furnished by the Albany Musicians Association; a wheel of chance from the American Legion, with prizes; decorations for the outdoor patio from Disabled American Veterans; instant photos by Jewish War Veterans; and aid for wheelchair patients from the American Red Cross.

There are about 650 patients at the hospital. For patients not well enough to visit the carnival, the carnival will go to them.

Transit State Aid

ALBANY — Ulster County (and the city of Kingston) have received more than $30,000 in state assistance to subsidize their mass transit systems from the state for the first quarter of the state fiscal year.

The County will get 29,242 as against $742 for the city under the program which allows nine cents per vehicle mile and 1.4 cents per passenger mile. The program subsidizes 50 per cent of the operating deficits of the municipalities.

Kingston and the county have had the assistance for the past year. Legislation backers by Gov. Carey made it a permanent program this year.

Rhinebeck Graduates

RHINEBECK — The 98 graduates of Rhinebeck High School recently listened to a commencement address by the Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., (R-25th Dist.) from Millbrook.

Salutatory address was given by Joy H. Paydon, and valedictory by Ralph B. Stuart III. There were 34 prizes awarded to graduating seniors.

Robert Powell and Family

Memoriam

In loving memory of my mother, Theresa Carpio, who passed away July 1, 1969. What would I give to see your smile,
And sit with you and talk awhile
Day and night I think of you,
The things you used to say and do.
The blow was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with you so kind and dear.
I wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say goodbye.
Loving Daughter Linda

Bank Rate Raised

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today raised its prime interest rate to 7 percent from 6 1/2 percent, reflecting the Federal Reserve's steps to slow the growth in the nation's money supply.

It was the first increase in the key interest rate barometer since Jan. 3 and reverses a drop in the rate which has been declining steadily since last September when it was at an historic high of 12 percent. In January, the rate took a temporary jump and then resumed its downward trend.

The formula Citibank uses to determine its interest rate — short-term interest rates on commercial paper and government loans — actually justified a full one-half percentage point increase to 7 1/2 percent.

The bank was expected to up its interest to that level next week.

The sudden upward trend follows recent moves by the Federal Reserve Board to tighten credit and monetary growth rates after two months of accelerated growth.

For the two-month period, the nation's money supply — cash in hand and in checking accounts — had grown by an estimated 20 percent, far faster than Fed Chairman Arthur Burns had planned. The Fed subsequently tightened the reigns, raising interest rates and slowing monetary growth.

Stocks

Closing quotations yesterday by Loeb, Rhoades, and Co., members of New York Stock Exchange and American Stock Exchange, Kingston Plaza, Kingston, N.Y., Joseph Garvita, resident manager. Phone 331-1900.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, which has shown concern over rising short-term interest rates, opened lower today in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a seven-point loser Wednesday, was off 1.95 to 868.43 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 109 to 92, among the 330 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover amounted to about 420,000 shares.

Just as the market opened, New York's trendsetting First National City Bank announced it would raise its prime rate to 7 percent from 6 1/2 percent effective Monday. Speculation over this move sent prices skidding Wednesday.

Early stock prices included: Steels—U.S. Steel 60 1/2, off 1/4; Armco 28 1/4, up 1/4; Motors—Ford 40 1/2, up 1/4.

MANNERS: (Q.) I have problems with my mother. She doesn't like Robert, this boy I go with. She said he doesn't have any manners and if I don't quit him she is going to kick me out of the house or kill me.
 I told her if I could just talk on the phone with him that would be enough, but she told me she would kick me out or kill me if she caught us talking on the phone. What can I do?—FORBIDDEN IN CALIFORNIA

(A.) Ask your mother how Robert could change his manners to please her. From the intensity of her talk, I gather that there is something specific that he does that she does not approve of.

If you can find out what this is and get her permission to talk seriously with Robert about it, you may be able to get him to change and get your mother to accept him or at least be less violently disapproving.

PEN PALS: (Comment) Hundreds of names and addresses have come in to me for the Teen Forum national pen pal list. But there is still time for you to be on the list if you hurry.

To be included, send your name and mailing address, including your zip code, to me now. Mail it to Jean Adams, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.

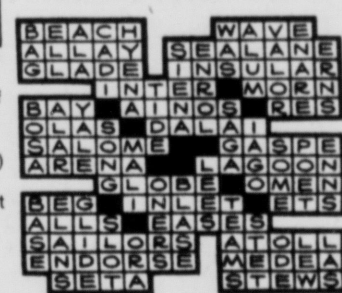

Be sure your name and address are correct, clear and readable. When the list is ready, I will let all of you know in Teen Forum how much postage to send for your copy.

South's three-club bid is what is sometimes called a "True reverse." The bid shuts out a return to two hearts and by definition is a reverse bid even though the hearts and clubs have been bid in order of rank. It is also a game-forcing bid.

North's jump to four hearts is a very good bid indeed. It shows three good hearts. With four hearts he would have raised hearts right away. It also says: "Partner, you have forced to game. I like hearts and if you want to go on to a slam it is up to you. I have told my all."

South does want to go on. He had intended to raise diamonds, but now there is no reason to go to the minor suit and he Blackwoods to the slam.

Priest-Politician Campaigns For 'White Rights'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Father Francis X. Lawlor is a man who believes in miracles, but he demurs when people suggest it's a miracle he is still alive in politics and running for Congress.

He could get an argument from some fellow Chicago politicians.

For the better part of 10 years, the Roman Catholic priest has been fighting for preservation of white neighborhoods on the city's Southwest Side.

Lawlor won a Republican primary May 27 that wasn't even supposed to have been held and he did it as a write-in candidate because he wasn't on the ballot. That is something of a miracle in Chicago.

And if he wins in the special election July 8 in Illinois' sprawling 5th Congressional District, that would be a bit of a political miracle. The district is 30 percent black and generally votes 5-1 to 8-1 Democratic.

But Lawlor, who does not speak lightly of miracles, probably would not be surprised.

Some of what he says can be startling, such as a proposal to use soldiers, sailors and marines as auxiliary police patrolling city streets.

He said he decries racism, but dwells on what he thinks is an imperative need for blacks to learn to "speak properly" and "show their respect," presumably toward standard white society.

The former science teacher in Chicago Catholic high schools has been called a racist, a demagogue, a maverick priest, a blue nose, bull-headed, even fanatic. There were also some of opposite thinking who hinted they wished Lawlor was not quite so quick to acknowledge black Chicagoans as among "God's children" and entitled to certain inalienable rights.

Along the way, Lawlor won the trust and devotion of many of the whites he sought to organize through a network of neighborhood block clubs. His critics charged Lawlor was trying to keep the Southwest Side lily white, denying blacks a chance to escape the ghetto. Lawlor maintained he just wanted white families to stay put.

The gaunt, gray-haired son of a New York City policeman was stripped of his priestly duties in the Chicago archdiocese by Cardinal John Cody, who had his own ideas about how the church should act in the neighborhoods.

It is a hot, oppressive day outside and Lawlor is working in his shirt sleeves, his Roman Catholic collar tucked in his pocket. He talks in a baritone monotone, in a reflective, emotionless manner, but will suddenly pound the table.

He mourns the retreat of white Catholics, leaving the churches and schools where he has spent most of his adult life. He appears a priest first, a polemicist second.

"Some Catholics will say, 'How come you're not in the church?'" he said. "Well I am in the church as much as anybody else."

"Here's my people losing their homes. There's pressure being brought on them, their neighborhoods, their businesses, their livelihood... the change is around in the air. The fear is here. Can't you have mercy toward those people?"

"I am fully conscious that if I get to Congress 30 percent of the people that I will be serving under oath will be black. And I fully intend to look to their interests and to help them improve their community, to improve their way of life, to reduce crime and to better their schools and to see that they have adequate housing."

"But not in a way that I'm going to take them out of their community and throw them on a white community and say, 'Okay, I've done it for you, because that doesn't do it.'"

Lawlor irritated a lot of people, including Cardinal Cody, who ordered Lawlor out of town in 1968. He thought it over and decided he would rather not, even though that meant he was stripped of official priestly functions in the archdiocese.

Instead, Lawlor ran as a delegate to the convention reframing Illinois' constitution and won. Then he ran as an independent candidate for alderman from Chicago's 15th ward and the blue collar bungalow dwellers to whom he was dedicated elected him.

In the city council, the priest got fed up with what he called the iron control of the Chicago Democratic organization. He decided after one term as alderman to "get back into the regular priestly work," to go anywhere and do anything his superiors in the Augustinian order wished.

Then Rep. John Kluczynski, a longtime Democratic wheelhorse, died. Lawlor discovered he could run for the seat even though he did not happen to live in the 5th District.

If he had failed to make a dent in the City Council, he figured "my people have to be represented in the United States Congress." His fondest hope was to secure legislation to bar the Federal Housing Administration from writing cheap mortgages "for more than 5 percent of the existing households in any place in the nation."

As a write-in candidate, Lawlor won the Republican primary by a 3,192 to 2,203 margin. He will face Democrat John Fary, veteran state legislator, who piled up 43,235 votes as an unopposed candidate in the primary. Lawlor, by his admission, was "slaughtered" in Daley's 11th ward and in the black wards.

Lawlor assessed the odds sitting in his storefront campaign headquarters at 1206 W. 51st Street, an old Polish neighborhood on the very edge of solid black territory. He professed himself unfazed.

The priestly politician pointed out the next election is not like a Chicago primary, when Democratic regulars shrink from asking for a Republican ballot.

"We've won in other elections against the Democratic machine," he said. "Now it is more a question of candidates rather than parties. You don't have to ask for a Republican ballot to vote for Father Lawlor."

"You just go behind that curtain and you put the X any place, any where you want and if you're right thinking you put it in front of my name."
